Central Christian Church, est. 1899

Downtown Greenville, Texas

The Central Christian Church built in 1899 was designed by famed Dallas architect, James E. Flanders, whose work included many Gothic Protestant churches in Texas at the turn of the 20th Century. The church's style is taken mostly from the Late Gothic Revival. With tall gabled roof towers clad in metal stamped shingles, tall arched "Tiffanyesque" stained glass windows, and 1920 pipe organ built by the Austin Company of Hartford, Conn., curved padded pew seating for 400, the 19th Century church presents a living gospel link to the distant past as a uniquely historic, auditory venue experience designed with natural acoustic amplification of the period.

"Out of the arms of defeat Mike Farris has done a victory lap... He takes people who are hurting, who are broken, who think they are alone and through just the sound of his voice he lets them know that they're not...that's magic."
